Information for employees on the use of the Nhill software

Business
Name
Person to contact about your data
Retention period of the log decided by the business

Our business uses the Nhill software for sales, the till, stock, invoicing or management. For your security and the company’s, this software records the actions carried out with each account.

What is recorded: your logins (date, time, device, IP address), the documents you create or issue (invoices, receipts, quotes), the payments and cash movements you record, stock corrections, approvals of discounts or cancellations, changes to settings.

What is not recorded: your activity outside the software (browsing, personal messages, location).

Why: internal control, prevention of errors and fraud, proof of operations, account security, cash sessions and reports per employee.

Who can see it: you see your own actions; the people in the business whose role allows it (for example the account holder and administrators) see the log of the whole business. The Nhill Solution team does not consult this log; the overall usage figures it consults are themselves recorded in it.

Changes: nobody can change the log from the software.

Your rights: you can ask for access to the data about you and its correction if it is inaccurate, from the person named above.

Your obligations: use only your own account, never give your password (even to a colleague or a manager), log out of shared devices.
