[BUSINESS NAME] — Information to employees about the use of the Nhill software

Our business uses the Nhill software for [sales, till, stock, invoicing]. For your security and the company's, this software records the actions done with each account.

What is recorded: your sign-ins (date, time, device, IP address), the documents you create or issue (invoices, receipts, quotes), the payments and cash movements you record, stock corrections, approvals of discounts or cancellations, changes to settings.

What is not recorded: your activity outside the software (browsing, personal messages, location).

Why: internal control and prevention of errors and fraud, evidence of transactions, account security, till sessions and per-employee reports.

Who can see it: you see your own actions ("My activity"); [the owner, administrators and accountant] see the log of the whole business. The Nhill publisher does not look at this log, except during a support intervention, which is itself written to the log.

How long: [PERIOD DECIDED BY THE BUSINESS]. Nobody can modify the log from the software.

Your rights: you can ask for access to the data about you and its correction if it is inaccurate, by contacting [PERSON IN CHARGE, CONTACT].

Your obligations: only use your own account, never share your password (not even with a colleague or manager), sign out of shared computers.
